Partnership Matters

Founding Partnership Matters

Becoming a founding corporate partner of Women in the Composites Industry (WCI) is an investment in the long-term strength, competitiveness, and sustainability of the composites and advanced materials workforce. As our industry faces persistent challenges around talent attraction, retention, leadership development, and knowledge transfer, WCI provides a platform where companies can actively contribute to shaping the future while gaining visibility, credibility, and connection across the global composites ecosystem. Being a founder partner indicates your early support and allows you early access to other opportunities throughout the year.

WCI corporate partners are not simply sponsors; they are visible allies and industry leaders committed to advancing professional growth, mentorship, and opportunity for women in the composites and advanced materials space. Through partnership, organizations gain meaningful brand alignment with leadership development, access to emerging and established talent, and engagement in conversations that directly impact innovation, workforce readiness, and organizational culture. In its founding year, WCI partnerships offer a unique opportunity to help build something lasting - while positioning your organization as a company that does not just talk about progress but actively invests in it.
